Theological and ethical challenges for churches living with the COVID pandemic

The COVID-19 pandemic challenges churches in many ways – regarding their liturgical practices, spirituality, pastoral care, diaconal work, finances, communication policies, how to practise fellowship and solidarity between churches, and, last but not least, both theologically and politically.

The impact of the pandemic on the social and health policies of the countries concerned also affect the churches' work and witness. Some are quite certain, while others suggest that the "passing of the crisis" won't and can't herald a "return to normal". This crisis is also a chance to renew and rethink many issues and habits that churches until now assumed to be standard or not questionable.

Target audience

Church experts in ethical issues, social responsibility and contemporary theological issues, and people interested in church reactions to the consequences of the pandemic.
